Jenny has been a member of Zoos SA for well over 30 years and loved coming to visit the animals regularly – but she wanted to be more involved. Now a Life Member and regular supporter of the zoo, Jenny is also a long term volunteer and has decided to leave a gift in her Will to Zoos SA.

“I love the zoo, I love the fact you can see, hear and smell the animals. There’s something very special about being able to really connect with an animal and understand more about how it lives and how we impact the way in which it lives in the wild. Zoos are a really important part of the circle of life – they ensure we can save species from extinction but they also ensure that children of today and tomorrow can experience wildlife beyond their laptops and the TV.”

Jenny has been pivotal in the development of Zoos SA as she and a group of like-minded people formed the Volunteer Group back in 1983. That group has grown significantly and now numbers over 600 volunteers across Adelaide and Monarto Zoos.

“Being a volunteer at the zoo is a great way for me to stay active in my retirement years and to stay connected with others – I only come in once a week now but it is great to be involved and to have a chat with my friends whilst I’m here.

Volunteering is my way of giving to the charity whilst I am alive; leaving a gift in my Will is my final gift to the zoo but a way for others to continue enjoying the animals and people that mean so much to me and have been such a major part of my life.”
